A SUMMARY OF YOUR RIGHTS UNDER THE FAIR CREDIT REPORTING ACT (FOR ALL APPLICANTS)

The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) promotes the accuracy, fairness, and privacy of information in the files of consumer reporting agencies. There are many types of consumer reporting agencies, including credit bureaus and specialty agencies (such as agencies that sell information about check writing histories, medical records, and rental history records). Here is a summary of your major rights under the FCRA. For more information, including information about additional rights, go to www.ftc.gov/credit or write to: Consumer Response Center, Room 130-A, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580.

- You must be told if information in your file has been used against you. Anyone who uses a credit report or another type of consumer report to deny your application for credit, insurance, or employment – or to take another adverse action against you – must tell you, and must give you the name, address, and phone number of the agency that provided the information.
- You have the right to know what is in your file. You may request and obtain all the information about you in the files of a consumer reporting agency (your "file disclosure"). You will be required to provide proper identification, which may include your Social Security number. In many cases, the disclosure will be free. You are entitled to a free file disclosure if:
 - a person has taken adverse action against you because of information in your credit report;
 - you are the victim of identify theft and place a fraud alert in your file;
 - your file contains inaccurate information as a result of fraud;
 - you are on public assistance;
 - you are unemployed but expect to apply for employment within 60 days.

In addition, by September 2005 all consumers will be entitled to one free disclosure every 12 months upon request from each nationwide credit bureau and from nationwide specialty consumer reporting agencies. See www.ftc.gov/credit for additional information.

- You have the right to ask for a credit score. Credit scores are numerical summaries of your credit-worthiness based on information from credit bureaus. You may request a credit score from consumer reporting agencies that create scores or distribute scores used in residential real property loans, but you will have to pay for it. In some mortgage transactions, you will receive credit score information for free from the mortgage lender.
- You have the right to dispute incomplete or inaccurate information. If you identify information in your file that is incomplete or inaccurate, and report it to the consumer reporting agency, the agency must investigate unless your dispute is frivolous. See www.ftc.gov/credit for an explanation of dispute procedures.
- Consumer reporting agencies must correct or delete inaccurate, incomplete, or unverifiable information. Inaccurate, incomplete or unverifiable information must be removed or corrected, usually within 30 days. However, a consumer reporting agency may continue to report information it has verified as accurate.
- Consumer reporting agencies may not report outdated negative information. In most cases, a consumer reporting agency may not report negative information that is more than seven years old, or bankruptcies that are more than 10 years old.
- Access to your file is limited. A consumer reporting agency may provide information about you only to people with a valid need -- usually to consider an application with a creditor, insurer, employer, landlord, or other business. The FCRA specifies those with a valid need for access.
- You must give your consent for reports to be provided to employers. A consumer reporting agency may not give out information about you to your employer, or a potential employer, without your written consent given to the employer. Written consent generally is not required in the trucking industry. For more information, go to www.ftc.gov/credit.
- You may limit "prescreened" offers of credit and insurance you get based on information in your credit report. Unsolicited "prescreened" offers for credit and insurance must include a toll-free phone number you can call if you choose to remove your name and address from the lists these offers are based on. You may opt-out with the nationwide credit bureaus at 1-888-5OPT-OUT.
- You may seek damages from violators. If a consumer reporting agency, or, in some cases, a user of consumer reports or a furnisher of information to a consumer reporting agency violates the FCRA, you may be able to sue in state or federal court.
- Identity theft victims and active duty military personnel have additional rights. For more information, visit www.ftc.gov/credit.

States may enforce the FCRA, and many states have their own consumer reporting laws. In some cases, you may have more rights under state law. For more information, contact your state or local consumer protection agency or your state Attorney General. Federal enforcers are:

A SUMMARY OF YOUR RIGHTS UNDER THE CALIFORNIA CONSUMER CREDIT REPORTING AGENCIES ACT (FOR CALIFORNIA APPLICANTS ONLY)

The California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act ("CCRAA") is designed to promote accuracy, fairness and privacy of information contained in the files of consumer reporting agencies. If an investigative consumer report is sought for employment purposes, other than for suspicion of wrongdoing by you, your employer must provide you with written notice of the name and address of the investigative consumer reporting agency conducting the investigation, the nature and scope of the investigation requested and a summary of your rights under the CCRAA, as outlined below. You have been provided with such notice in the disclosure and authorization forms given to you by your employer and this summary will outline your specific rights under the CCRAA. You may have additional rights under federal law.

- You have the right to inspect the consumer reporting agency's files on you. At your request and with proper identification, which includes a valid driver's license, social security account number, military identification card or credit card, you are allowed to visually inspect all files maintained by the consumer reporting agency at the time you made your request. All information maintained by the consumer reporting agency will be available for your inspection with the exception of the sources of information acquired solely for use in preparing an investigative consumer report and used for no other purpose. The consumer reporting agency shall also identify the recipients of any investigative consumer report on you that it has furnished within the past two (2) year period for employment purposes and within the past year for any other purposes. You may request the address and telephone number of the recipients that the consumer reporting agency identifies.
- You may view the consumer reporting agency's files on you in a number of ways. You can inspect the consumer reporting agency's files in person during normal business hours if you provide the consumer reporting agency with reasonable notice that you will be inspecting the files. You can inspect the files by providing the consumer reporting agency with a written request stating that you would like copies of the files to be sent to you at a specified address. If you request a copy of the files, proper identification must be sent with the written request by certified mail. Additionally, the consumer reporting agency is not responsible if the mail is mishandled and your files are disclosed to third parties. You can also inspect the files through telephone disclosure. To inspect the files through telephone disclosure, you must provide the consumer reporting agency with a written request that includes proper identification and a phone number where the call is either prepaid or can be charged.
- The consumer reporting agency must provide you with an explanation for the information contained in your files. The consumer reporting agency is required to provide trained personnel to explain the information that is contained in your files and was provided to you by the consumer reporting agency.
- The consumer reporting agency must explain any coded information in your files. The consumer reporting agency is required to provide you with a written explanation of any coded information contained in your files. This written explanation must be provided every time you inspect the files.
- You can be accompanied by one person when inspecting your files. One person can accompany you when you inspect your files, as long as that person has proper identification. You may be required to provide the consumer reporting agency, at its request, with written permission allowing the consumer reporting agency's employees to discuss information contained in your files in front of the person accompanying you.
